The latest release of Photoshop CC for macOS (2.1.2) is already available from the App Store. Thomas Hartington (bishop) Thomas Hartington (1489–1541), a native of Kent and son of John Hartington, 10th Baron de Berry, was the last Catholic bishop in England. On his father's death in 1512, his wardship passed to Henry VIII, and he took part in the Second Battle of St. Quentin in 1522. He was appointed assistant warden of the Tower of London by the king, but in 1528 he was imprisoned in the Tower on suspicion of treason. He was not brought to trial, but on the orders of Wolsey he was sent back to France in 1530, to the duchy of Savoy, where he was made a canon of the cathedral of Auxonne and chaplain to Francis I. When Charles V entered England on his return from the Field of the Cloth of Gold in 1520, he kept Thomas in his service as a Catholic chaplain at the castle of Windsor and took him with him to London in 1523. In 1524, after the king's marriage to Katherine of Aragon, Thomas was appointed chaplain to the king, but he refused to attend at the royal court and was committed to the Tower in September 1525. He was released after six months' imprisonment, and in 1526 was promoted to archdeacon of Suffolk. On the accession of Mary I, Thomas was restored to favour and in 1536 was appointed dean of Rouen, but this was soon withdrawn for reasons of state. In 1542 Thomas moved to Paris, and took part in the French 82157476af
